

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

The Princess in Purple

or

The Williams of the West

BY

GEORGE E. MAC LEAN, '71 --President of the State University of Iowa.

"Now it chanced that I had been,
While life was yet in bud and blade, betroth'd
To one, a neighboring Princess."

* * *

"Sweet and low, sweet and low,
Wind of the western sea,
Low, low, breathe and blow,
Wind of the western sea!"

The Princess,
TENNYSON.

The romance of our theme drawn from the purple parchment of history in memory's letters of light, justifies the poetry and the prose of our title. To the Williams man it means something of more than sophomore style and splendor, though it bear some slight resemblance to the title of the sophomore's essay on "Athens" which he called "Footsteps on the Sands of Time, or The City of the Violet Crown." Something may be forgiven him, and perchance, us, for the Williamstown atmosphere is so surcharged with classic lore that in 1792 the applicants for a charter for the college said, "We hope that it is a laudable wish we indulge of seeing Massachusetts the Athens of the United States of America, to which young gentlemen from any part of the Union may resort for instruction in all the branches of useful and polite literature."

In the same spirit President Gilman has called the nine colleges founded up to the time of the American Revolution, "the nine colonial muses". As the first poetess of New England was called the tenth muse, so may Williams be counted the tenth among the colleges in virtue of a colonial colonel being her founder in 1755. It was her good fortune not to take form until she could be ranked among the first truly American colleges established in the period of college planting that succeeded the American Revolution.

It stands as the first western American college. It was placed in the township west of Fort Massachusetts, "called West Township". Williams founded this "college of the wilderness", as Governor Russell at the Centennial well named it, in a frontier hamlet of scarce a dozen pioneers, connected only by trail with the eastern seaboard. Even the first quarter of a century of the college passed without a stage line connection. Like scouts of learning and pickets of advancing civilization the students came on foot or horseback or by a chance wagon. Williams, the soldier, planted at New England's western gateway in the mountain passes not only Fort Massachusetts, but a college whose students should guard the little eastern New England and troop to the west to make a greater New England. It is significant that the institution is on a river flowing westward and that its first and even yet best hall is "West College".

The attempt to remove, in 1819, this western outpost eastward was met by the plea of its friends breathing the western spirit. They alluded to the "cheapness of education, the good habits of their citizens, the few temptations to vice, and the high reputation of the institution for the propagation of literature and science and the pure principles of our holy religion". Their plea prevailed on the ground that it was reputation and not mere location which constituted the attraction. And yet, so wild and western, in the earlier sense of poverty and crudeness, was the college that the young sophomore and poet Bryant, left in 1811, dissatisfied with the "degree of scholarship" and the limited "course of studies". He did not like the "brutal and rather riotous proceeding" called gamutizing the Freshmen by the Sophomores.

It must be remembered that Bryant came from the refined home of a physician in which the classics were fostered, and that later he came to love the college well. A half century afterward he recollected with fondness the library with its classics, and books he had not seen elsewhere. His short residence in the little western college marked an epoch in his life. He made the precious discovery of Wordsworth's Lyrical Ballads, of which he said, "Upon opening the book a thousand springs seemed to gush up at once in my heart, and the face of nature, of a sudden, to change into a strange freshness and life." At the same time, stimulated by Wordsworth's book, the book of Nature was opened to him anew in the western wilds of Berkshire. Later he sings of these days:

"Ever apart from the resorts of men
He roamed the pathless woods, and hearkened long
To winds that brought into their silent depths
The murmurs of the mountain water falls."

The western spirit of the little college is shown in the first resolutions of the first corporation of the free school in Williamstown; "that it be open and free for the use and benefit of the inhabitants of that town and the free citizens of the American states indiscriminately." Soon they are concerned "to render the means of a liberal education more easy and bring them more within the power of the middling and lower classes of citizens." This was an unusual democratic note at the time in college circles. Western self-complacency and benevolence not unworthy the back-dooryard of Boston, combined with enterprise, appear in their thought of attracting, "great numbers of youth from adjacent states, thus furnishing an opportunity of diffusing our best habits and manners among the citizens of our sister states and at the same time adding to the influence and wealth of Massachusetts."

The fifth international convention of the student volunteer missionary movement just held, though scarce recognized, marks the centennial of the Mills meeting under the haystack. It has almost been forgotten that the original "Forward Movement" recked little of the distinction between home and foreign missions. The young heroes wished to break out upon the heathen, and indeed with boyish enthusiasm they gave pre-eminence to home missions. They proposed as real "pioneers to furnish themselves with knapsacks and guns sufficient to kill game for their subsistence, and to march westward into the wilderness."

How full is the proof that the original college was the "Williams of the West." It gave us the first great national poet, the poet of nature, and the great home and foreign missionary movement coinciding with the on sweep of democracy in the nineteenth century.

Today, Williams is so elegant and eastern that the "Williams of the West" suggests only some little struggling college west of the Alleghanies if not on the Pacific slope modelled on the pattern of the grand old college. Why is there this frequent and precious tribute to Williams and only exceptionally to her New England sisters? The ready and partial answers do not satisfy. It is not enough to say that above a fifth of her alumni reside west of the Alleghanies, or that middle and western states contribute nearly twenty per cent. of her undergraduates. It does not suffice to say that she has given a President of the United States from a western commonwealth, a Judge of the Supreme Court, United States Senators and Congressmen, Governors and leaders in public life. To count her successful, but not numerous, teachers in western schools and colleges may be the beginning of an answer. With pride President Carter, visiting an educational gathering in the middle west, found a half dozen heads of colleges and universities who were sons of Williams. Four of these were in great state universities. Several state universities time and again sent to Williams for their presidents.

These institutions are peculiarly the people's. Truly said Chancellor Snow: "Education of the people, by the people, for the people, is the watchword of the western educator." This sentiment explains the secret of the gravitation of Williams men to state universities in the light of the purpose of the first trustees to bring a liberal education "within the power of the middling and lower classes."

"Here comes", said Chancellor Canfield in the Centennial oration, "clearly to the front again the idea of the necessity of general education for the sake of all those who might thus find new inspiration by which to lift whole communities from the lower to a higher plane." In part our question is answered by the influence of the procession of preachers and home missionaries from Williams who kept pace with the pioneers first in central and western New York, and then across the Western Reserve of Ohio on to Michigan, Illinois, Iowa and to the western territories. A Williams man preached the first sermon in Chicago and organized the first church. These Williams pioneer missionaries pushed on, never resting until the Pacific was reached, establishing colleges as well as churches in many of which to this day Williams men, like Penrose of Whitman, the furthest "Williams of the West", still preside.

We have found some reasons for an occasional "Williams of the West". But we seek to know the why for something higher, the generic, the "Williams of the West." We have fairly found by induction from our fragmentary historical studies, that Williams is the type of a genus. She is almost the unique type of the American college. She is peculiarly American, born after the revolution, and as we have seen, with the spirit of the modern western college. Her orators, like Canfield and the present president, President Hopkins, may truly trace her origin to the reformation, the spacious times of Elizabeth and the puritan Emanuel College of Cambridge, England.

"And by descent from royall lynage came,
Of ancient kinges and queenes, that had of yore
Their scepters stretcht from east to westerne shore."

But she really dates from the western shore. Unlike Harvard, Yale or Dartmouth, baptized with the names of English men, she bears the name of an American soldier and layman. Church and state, minister and missionary, were the founders of others. This was secular, a free school open to American freemen and entrusted to plain and patriotic citizens without other qualifications. Brought forth in a period when theological controversy and political partizanship dominated colleges, enjoying freedom through the endowment of a pious founder, deceased—happily not a living patron—the college in the spirit of Dr. Arnold was able to "compass an education which was not based upon religion, but was in itself religious." Consecrated to the classics by its first President, to the Holy Spirit by another, and by its greatest President through the same spirit to "science, pure literature and the freest inquiry," it was fitted to become a model, modern, American institution. At the beginning, with French accepted as an equivalent for Greek, with a member of congress as a professor of law and civil polity, it strangely anticipated present times. It contradistinguished itself at the first, from "our University" at Cambridge, and has held itself ever true to the college ideal, throwing off speedily a medical college with which it became entangled. Flowering out from the lower free school and academy, looking up to the University of Cambridge as the "parent to whose lustre" it should loyally add, it is the first real American college to recognize itself as a link in a series of schools crowned by a university. In the light of the development of state systems of education this is more significant even than the fact President Henry Hopkins eloquently set out as "the combination in organic unity of the church, the state and free education, culminating in the college." The notable traditional firsts this college has attained upon this continent bespeak its democracy and modernity. It is reputed to have published the first annual catalogue, to have formed the first alumni association, to have built the first astronomical observatory, and to have inaugurated the first scientific expedition.

A glance at the latest catalogue of the college shows that it continues to be among the first to adjust itself in methods and freedom of studies and ranges of subjects to the modern form of the ancient college. It promises to remain the type specimen of the American college. As the Thompson memorial chapel rises above all the other buildings of Williams to stand, in the words of President Hopkins, "as a majestic and enduring symbol of the democratic and catholic faith of Williams College," so Williams towers above all her sisters as a typical American college.

We cannot do less than hail her as the Princess in Purple. Her color, royal purple, is fitting since purple is the combination of crimson and blue, the colors of Harvard and Yale, from which, on the "western shore," she sprang. In her blend the red and the blue, the blood and the truth, the life and the light.

Throned on the three hilltops amidst the empurpled circling mountains, like the priestess of Apollo upon her tripod at Delphi, our Princess in Purple, fast by the oracle of God, is the prophetess of American christianity, culture and civilization.

"O hark, O hear! how thin and clear,
And thinner, clearer, farther going!
O sweet and far from cliff and scar
The horns of Elfland faintly blowing!
Blow, let us hear the purple glens replying:
Blow, bugle; answer, echoes, dying, dying, dying.

* * *

Our echoes roll from soul to soul,
And grow forever and forever."

AS usual late, but by no means as late as usual, the Gul alights in your midst on his fiftieth annual visit.

A rare old bird is the Gul. A full half century ago, on a day still within the memory of some of the alumni, he descended upon the college for his first timid visit. He was but a weak fledgling, in fledgling's clothes, uncertain of his reception. Since then he has weathered violent storms of faculty disapproval; he has feebly beat his way over arid deserts of literary and artistic ability; he has shrunk under the frosty blight of unsympathetic advertisers. The Gul has indeed made a game fight for his life, and has prospered in spite of his troubles. We of the Board, in the year that we have had him with us, have grown genuinely fond of him.

Seriously, we believe that the Guliemensian has a place in Williams college. Call it, as you will undoubtedly if you have any connection with it, a nuisance, an expense, the depository of much labor that might better be spent otherwise. What harm? For where else is preserved the matter embraced in its 300 pages? What else can take its place as the memory book of a man's college course? Answers are footless. The studes want it; they buy it; and cherish it. Long live the Gul!

CLASS OF 1906

Senior Editorial

COLLEGE is often spoken of as life's preparatory school. But it is more than that—it is a segment of life itself. Here for four years we live, even as we have lived before, and shall live after, if the Fates so will. Here, each man after his own fashion, we use the faculties with which we have been endowed, much as we shall use them after we leave these surroundings, and here we have opportunity to grow, or to wither away, much as we shall have opportunity in the world outside. To you of the Senior Class, therefore, the Gul, would bid farewell, not as to those who are but just about to live, but as to those who are about to live more fully.

It is the segment of life which you have lived here that the Gul would recall to you for this fleeting moment. Of details we cannot write—your deeds, are they not recorded in the archives of the past? And after all, life is a far subtler thing than a mere matter of deeds. So if you have occasionally been lacking in achievement, let him who is guiltless cast the first stone. If you have felt the sting of defeat, you have also experienced the joy of victory. You have striven for Alma Mater, and your striving has not been in vain. And you number in your midst good men and true, men whom we shall miss sorely when you have departed.

But the Gul is of ancient lineage, and lo, these many years have its ancestors watched class after class depart, and yet all has been well. So we watch you as you are about to pass over the threshold, and we turn to take up the duties you lay down; but first we pause to wish you all an overflowing measure of truest success in the larger life, and to call to you, "Hail, and Farewell"

The Juniors

Junior Editorial

PREJUDICED praise is rightly esteemed as of little value. Hence this golden opportunity to deliver an encomium on the class of 1907 will be passed by. If our elder brothers of 1905 and 1906 had seen fit to voice our merits, to do it displaying, if need be, that heavenly commanded charity, we should have felt profoundly touched—and surprised). If the Gul of our younger brothers of 1908 shall think well of our conduct we shall be gratified.

Instead then, a bit of plagiarized and colloquialized advice. Fellows, buck up! Find your specialty and excel in it. Get busy at something. Better be the best cigarette roller in college than be known for general mediocre goodness. Go at something hard, be it what it may, but do it well; do it a little better than anybody else. For time is fleeting fast. Our college days are numbered—and their number is few. It will soon be “23” for us. Let the remainder be marked by consistent effort along some line. It is the best way.

As for the past, forget it. The main thing is the present; if that is taken care of, the future will look out for itself. Regrets are mostly vain. Tears for mistakes of the past may blind the eyes to the opportunities of the present. And we have yet a goodly part left to us of the second best year in our college course, and we have yet to live the whole of the best year of the four. A man's attainments are only limited by the goal line of his ambition. Put that a long way ahead and strive for it.

Sophomore Editorial

A SOPHOMORE class is an anomaly around college. Feared by the freshmen, disdained by the juniors and ignored by the seniors, the sophomore is quite apt to feel in his inmost soul that he is the scum of the earth. Especially is this true if the track meet, the baseball game, or the football championship has gone the wrong way. Add to this, that feeling of depression that follows the successful introduction of the canes and the subsequent down pour of bills that seem to be especially obtrusive in the second year and you have an explanation for the blue haze which sometimes hangs like a pall over the sophomore.

On the other side of the balance must be weighed several advantages. The curriculum is more yielding; there is the prom; and there is biology one. Life is not altogether sad. It is at this time that the real leaders of the class have their opportunity to come forward. The elections bring honors to many men. There is an opportunity to get some of the best courses offered in college.

If from our present eminence gained by one year's precedence in the paths you are soon to take, we may be permitted to give you a word of advice, let it be only this. beware of the "cinch" courses anticipated by every junior. A man generally gets good out of a course in direct proportion to the work he puts into it. Take if you will your "Pops," your "Springers," and your "Dickys" but take them in moderation and in the spirit in which they are offered. Do not think that because you are not forced to work that you are not expected to work, or that merely passing a course implies any value received.

CLASS OF 1909

Freshman Editorial

FRESHMEN, you're doing well. True, you haven't yet produced a Duffy, an Eckersall, or a Clarkson to perform wonders on Weston field; you haven't brought forth a Kipling for the Lit; nor a Daniel Webster for the debating societies. But you seem to be a good bunch of aspirants and we have no doubt that you will average up about as well as the classes that have gone before you. Just keep on trying. When a class has a few stars of the first magnitude, we have noticed that the rest of the members sit back and look on. You have not this excuse.

We are sorry you have missed the beneficial effects following good hazing. A little, wisely administered, would have done you good. It is up to you to demonstrate the success of the conservatives' theory that the institution is unnecessary. You will be rewarded by being freed from the task of hazing 1910.

As a class you have hung together well. May you continue free from cliques; from wire-pulling crowds; and from internal jealousies. Back up 1909 and you will be proving loyal to the college.

In Memoriam
Edwin Garvin Shea
Class of 1907

EDWIN GARVIN SHEA, who entered Williams in the class of 1907, was a student here until the time of his death, October 15, 1904. From the very beginning of his course he took a prominent and successful part in undergraduate activities; and, more than this, his sunny temperament and frank, open nature endeared him to all who knew him. In his death both his class and his college sustained a great loss; and we yet miss him, and ever shall, not only for what he did, but also for what he was—a loyal and sympathetic friend.

PRESIDENT BRADFORD P. RAYMOND Presiding Officer

Question: Resolved, That in the United States the nomination of candidates for minor elective offices should be by the method of the primary.

By a minor elective office is understood an office with a constituency narrower than one of the states.

By the method of the primary is understood any method of nomination by the entire body of the party, without the intervention of delegates.

Adopted March 18, 1896

The Honor System of conducting examinations is one of the most successful features of the administrative scheme of Williams College. Under this system the presence of proctors at examinations is dispensed with, and each student is placed upon his honor, only being required to sign a statement to the effect that he has neither given nor received aid during the examination. All cases of suspected fraud are dealt with by the committee, who have the power to decide upon the question of guilt. The penalty is suspension for Freshmen and expulsion for members of the other classes.

"OUR GUESTS"

VARSITY BASEBALL

Baseball in 1905—A Review

The baseball season of 1905 was disappointing to those who did not look beneath the surface. At the start there were no clouds in the sky. Captain Durfee alone was lost from the successful 1904 team, and 1908, supplied, of course, with the usual crop of much-heralded freshman "phenoms", produced players of both matured ability and promise. As the season advanced, however, the man whose timely long hits and knowledge of opposing teams had frequently turned the scale in 1904 was missed more and more. A pitcher's poor condition, caused by exertions that had led to the winning of a national championship in basket ball, threw two men's work on one, and not even the "Cy" Youngs can pitch winning ball all the time.

In spite of handicaps, Williams at times played ball as in the palmy days of tri-collegiate championships. Four games were lost to Amherst, but balm for the hurt was found in decisive victories over Wesleyan and a fine contest with Dartmouth, where the purple played errorless ball in the enemy's country and shut out the Green. The fast base-running of Captain McCarty started many a rally, and the two home runs of Harry Watson, in his last game in a Williams uniform, made the passing of one of the Purple's greatest athletes as brilliant as his advent.

The managerial policy of increasing baseball interest instead of increasing baseball profits, will bear fruit another year. Despite the loss of the battery and half the infield, material will not be lacking to fill their places, and the Gul, which has weathered many a defeat and many a victory, has high hopes for a season in 1906 when all our purple banners will once more be proudly floating in the sky.

Williams Oldest Alumnus

Seventy-five years ago this coming commencement, William Rankin received his degree of A. B. from Williams College, and for the past few years has been her oldest living graduate. He is still well and active, with a clear brain, able to recall from personal knowledge events of 80 and 90 years ago. Mr. Rankin remembers the celebration in honor of peace that occurred at the close of the War of 1812, and he was too old for service in 1861 when the Civil War broke out. After his graduation in 1831, on his way from Williamstown to New York, he rode for the sake of novelty on a train behind the DeWitt Clinton, during the first month the little railroad was operated between Albany and Schenectady. This was the third railroad in the United States, the first being at Honesdale, Penn., and the second at Camden, N. J. Those were the days when Williams comprised West, East and South Colleges and Kellogg Hall; when Dr. Griffin was president and Mark Hopkins tutor; when recitations in Greek took place in the early morning by candle light and each student sawed his own fire-wood. The original Griffin Hall was built and dedicated while Mr. Rankin was in college.

Mr. Rankin was born in Elizabeth, N. J., September 15th, 1810. Through his veins runs Scotch, Holland, English, Huguenot and New England blood. When he was less than a year old his parents moved to Newark, where the father built up the largest hat factory in that section of the country. He was attracted to Williams from the fact that Edward Dorr Griffin, then its president, had been pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Newark. The trip between New York and Williamstown was a long and hard one. During open navigation it was made by boat from New York to Troy, and from there, 40 miles, by stage to Williamstown. In winter the 200 miles had to be covered on runners.

Returning to Newark after graduation, Mr. Rankin began the study of law in the office of ex-Governor William Pennington. After his admission to the bar he removed to Cincinnati, traveling by stage and canal boat, then the only way of making the journey. There he remained until 1850 when he was asked to become treasurer of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church, with head-quarters in New York City. He accepted and held the office for 37 years. During this long period of more than a third of a century he carried the Board over many hard places and financial crises.

As a citizen and member of the church his career has been one of great usefulness. Sixteen times he was elected commissioner to the General Assembly to represent the Presbytery of Newark; a record held, perhaps, by no other layman. Mr. Rankin has held many important positions in philanthropic and Christian institutions. The great desire in his heart as a young man was to be a minister, but he was obliged to forego this. Many institutions and individuals have had reason to bless him for timely financial aid and for wholesome advice.

In 1841 he married Ellen H. Stevens, of Cincinnati, who died in 1903. Since then Mr. Rankin has spent most of his time with his son, Prof. W. M. Rankin of Princeton University, Williams, '79. Another son, Rev. J. J. Rankin of Scranton, Penn, graduated from Williams in 1876.

This hale and hearty alumnus of nearly 96 years is a strong tribute to the beneficial effects of Berkshire air. The Gul extends to Mr. Rankin its hearty congratulations, with the wish that he may be able to make the 75th anniversary of his commencement the occasion of another visit to Williamstown.

The Ten Commandments of Williams

And the Dean spake all these words, saying:

I am the high councillor of this aggregation. I have led thee into the land of Sunday Chapel and "C" Rules, out of the house at 8.15 every morning.

I refuse to yield to Ebie's authority.

Thou shalt not break the Administrative rules, for since there are no others like them anywhere on the earth, I could not obtain another set.

I will exercise leniency in cases especially worthy of compassion by interpreting the rules literally.

Do not swear at me when I refuse thee a fourth Sunday cut, for I will not hold him cutless who taketh the evening train. Remember thy Sabbath cuts and keep them wholly.

Grind six days in the week and do all of thy work.

Honor the Honor System that thy days at this institution may not be shortened.

Thou shalt not be sick without obtaining permission in advance.

Thou shalt not give false information to thy neighbor in recitations.

Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's marks, nor his drag, for a hair in the head is worth two in the brush. Therefore, make the best of thine own possessions.

The Wolf's Little Joke

The story goes that following a recent and typical French examination a rash fresh, demonstrating that fools still rush in where angels fear to tread, approached Prof. Morton to learn his fate.

"Er—ah—did I—that is, did anyone pass your examination?" he asked.

"Why no, of course not," answered the Black Wolf.

"Didn't even the graphophone pass?"

"Well, yes that did. And do you know why? Because it keeps on grinding all the time."

La Reponse Polie

As college men we aim to be courteous. We also believe ourselves to have a due sense of appreciation of courtesy when shown by others. We take off our hats, therefore, to Mr. Gerig of the French department.

Mr. Gerig is a true gentleman, unspoiled by the strenuous, impolite age in which we live. It was Mr. Gerig who was walking down Spring street, intent upon an open book in his hand, when Dick Crooker's bequest, the big and Woolly dog, Ruff, bumped into him. Ruff is of the bourgeoisie and no respecter of persons.

Mr. Gerig was, however, equal to the occasion. The incident, which might easily have become an international episode endangering our friendly relations with the French Republic, ended there. Raising his hat and making one of his courtly bows, Mr. Gerig said "I beg your pardon," and passed on.

The College Reform Movement

(The following resolution, which up to then had been kept securely hidden in the innermost recesses of a dark cabinet, was inadvertently left on his desk by Ford on the evening of March 24th.)

"We're coming, we're coming,
A brave little band."

Do Something!

Be a man! Cast aside the hell poisons! Walk in the right way; walk up the hill and not down! Come out of the darkness; we have been there. Hear our confession. How strong we feel; how easily we broke off our shackles. You who are weak come to us.

A contribution to the discussion by HI HENRY and CLAPP'S CLARION.

President Hopkins addressed the college in chapel this morning on the hazing question. He stated that "Williams had received a black eye" by restoring hazing last Friday, and recommended a second college meeting to be held Tuesday evening, to reverse by unanimous vote Friday's action, that the good name of the college may be restored.

* * * A letter of regret from President Hopkins was read, characterizing the college as "harmonious, courageous and progressive," and asking the alumni "to help us realize the very best things of Williams."

We would have no objections whatsoever if that graduation rule, instead of requiring a student to get over half C's, demanded that he get half seas over.

"What will the Co-op do for the student?" asked Dicky Burlap at a college meeting early in the year. We'll bite. What will it do?

By a close vote the Gul board overruled a suggestion that a picture of the Thompson chapel be printed over the title, "The New Reading Room."

Wise Woodfin

Innocence per se is not a crime; on the contrary, men are wont to number it among the cardinal virtues. But innocence of the Woodfin brand is a capital offense. Master Woodfin's short career at college has been one breathless chase from hook to hook; wherever a line has dangled, there has Woodfin nibbled, whether the bait be clever or clumsy. Many a freshman has kindly gone to the drug store for a pound of ankle paste out of pure loyalty to the team; a surprisingly large number have disturbed Doc. Howard's nocturnal repose to learn the date of Mountain Day; a few each year timidly ask Prexy for permission to go to Ad. But the college has had to wait for 1909 to find a man who could take all of these hooks and still have nerve to rush to the baseball cage to attend the Sleeper trial; to attempt to purchase at Allie's a pair of steel-fibre trousers; to present an order from the prime minister of con artists himself for port wine; and to take a sophomore's word for it that he, Woodfin, was on the freshman cane committee. Wonderful Woodfin!

To Him Who Waits

It was the eve of the birthday of the Father of His Country. For an hour or more the vast crowd had been streaming into the huge vaulted armory; excited school boys, arguing over the respective merits of their teams, crowded forward to get a place in the front seats; pretty girls, talking vivaciously with their escorts, looked eagerly about the unusual scene. At the lower end of the armory, where the finish line crossed the polished floor, a band was playing march music with a swing that was almost irresistible. At the other end of the great room clustered groups of clean cut youth with immaculate suits of white muslin. The great meet was on.

"Last heat for the 40-yard!" announced the clerk of the course, waving his huge megaphone towards the contestants' corner.

Holroyd the Invincible rose easily to his feet. Resting his weight first on one leg and then on the other he ran back and forth a few paces. Next, exercising extreme care, he doubled both arms up towards the shoulders, then unfolded them. The spectators were breathless with suspense. "That's Holroyd, Holroyd of Williams" was whispered through the crowd. "Look at that form; look at those muscles." Fate, in the form of the clerk of the course, advanced and pinned the number 23 on the athlete's back. Holroyd, coolly ignoring the plaudits of the crowd, walked gingerly forward and after a few preliminaries, carefully executed, crouched in his place in the line.

"On your marks. Get set!"

Holroyd rested the tips of his fingers lightly on the floor, threw his body forward until it was rightly balanced for the spring, and waited. He threw a leisurely contemptuous glance to the right and left of him, where a score of nervous youths were trying to wait for the gun. "Look at that," cried the enthusiastic crowd. "There's coolness for you. He's no amateur."

No, Holroyd was no amateur. Having been in the B. A. A. meet, he knew the several false starts that must be made before the race would be run. And so, vigilant but unworried, he bided his time.

* * * *

Suddenly there stole over the senses of the waiting Holroyd the intuitive knowledge that he was deserted. Warily, that he might not miss the crack of the gun, he cast a glance from side to side. He was alone on the starting line. At the same instant there broke out the impetuous crash of the band announcing the finish of a race.

Holroyd rose cautiously to his feet. Slowly, balancing himself on his right foot, he raised his left leg. Nothing wrong. The process was next repeated with the right. Nothing wrong. Even more cautiously he threw his weight carefully on one foot and then on the other. Ah! The big toe on his right foot cracked. Screwing his face up with anguish the athlete limped across the floor. The crowd sighed with sympathy. But Holroyd went to his dressing room with uncowed spirit. Another race, and he was still unbeaten.

Still Another Bastardly Deed

(Apologies to the Boston Sanscrit).

Great was the joy in Billtown when the glad tidings arrived. DeRue—the great and (Heaven be praised) only DePue—was coming! For if there is anything we dote on, next to an Uncle Tom's Cabin, it is a ripe old minstrel show.

The parade? How can it be described in its glorious wealth of cotton costumery and tin tinsel? How our hearts thumped as the imposing galaxy slopped its way up through the Spring street mud; taking 120 seconds by our trusty Milhameter to pass a canine walking in the same direction. Oh, the enticing beauty of those banners, only enhanced by the smutty-faced small boys laboring along under their weight, strengthened by the anticipation of a gallery ticket! Oh the inspiring wails of imitation melody extracted painfully from the glittering instruments of the band! The noble brow of the immortal Bobbie, somewhat in need of a wash it is true, bore a classic calmness befitting his commanding position as major chromo as he struck a Napoleonic pose in the street where the mud was thinnest.

The free concert was one of the best given in front of Pa's this spring. Business in all the emporiums was suspended; Eddie Dempsey said he hadn't been thrilled so since Sig. Sawtelle played in Williamstown in '98. At its conclusion the wave of handclapping resounded like the fall of leaves wafted to the greensward when an autumnal zephyr agitates the branches.

That an impious hand dared be lifted against this glorious spectacle will be a stain on Judge Tenney's ledger until he buys a new one. Wot not the perpetrator of the outrage the respect due to "our guests?" No, he could not have wot. For as the rouge-hardened lineaments of Bobbie, Bobbie DeStew, the prop and pride of the histrionic element in America, were averted for an instant, some baseborn stude tenderly gathered in the leading banner and beat it for the woods, via the Alpine stairs which creep wearisomely up the heights back of the old chapel. Oh ye gods of justice! Oh ye patron saints of the burnt cork artists and egg dodgers! Why should you take your day off in Bobbie's hour of need?

For Bobbie DePew went away broken in heart. With burning tears of the best quality, tears of great price and bitter disappointment, he refused our invitation to come again. Marshalling his little flock of robbers about him he armed them with walking sticks of trusty old gaspipe and departed from our midst. Forever? Time only will tell. But hope springs eternal in the human breast.

Aspirations of a Freshman

(At a baseball game)

AS I came strolling past the stand
 I saw you sitting there
 And talking with that senior Jones—
 You, with your dainty air!

Your cheeks were flushed, your eyes were bright,
 And lips—ah, well, 'tis vain
 To seek a fitter simile
 Than red rose petals twain.

Heigh ho! It makes me dream: I wish
 That I could talk with you,
 Instead of that big senior Jones—
 Would you smile at me, too?

Or no—I'd like to walk up now,
 All dusty from a slide,
 That carried me across home plate,
 'Mid cheers from all our side.

And out the corner of my eye
 I'd see you look at me—
 While that big Jones would scowl and frown—
 Who'd care for such as he!

I'd walk up near the grandstand then,
 And you with shining eyes
 Would toss a rosebud through the net—
 Ah, what a victor's prize!

And then—confound it! What's the row?
 The inning's over? No!
 The water bucket! Well, I—sure!
 I'll get it, let me go!

Poems You Ought to Know

You Are Old, Father Milham

By MORRIS RUDNICK.

YOU are old, Father Milham," deBeaumont cried
 And your hair will soon show signs of age.
 But now it retains its own color undyed;
 Do you think that's the mark of a sage?"

"When young," replied Milham, "I wore my hair curled.
 And it always has had this same hue;
 But now I would not have it changed for the world;
 'Tis a color I never will rue."

"You are old," began Vic, edging close to the door,
 "And you do a great deal of hard work;
 Astronomically speaking you're chocked full of lore;
 Don't you think that it's high time to shirk?"

"In my youth," replied Milham, his ire now hot,
 "I thought a good deal of my brain;
 And I missed no recitation—took only one cut—
 'Twas from chapel—near drove me insane."

"You are old, Father Milham," continued the lad,
 "And the temperature foretell with ease;
 But most of the time you predict weather bad;
 Don't you think you would do well to please?"

"I've answered two questions and still you don't go;
 This one is the last I will render."
 But, "practically yes; theoretically no,"
 Was the only solution he'd tender.

"In the prisons which I have become most familiar with," said Mr. Billetdoux in a talk on Spain, "the fare is extremely slender."

If this gets to the ears of the deacons we see where part of the French department is put on probation.

DICKY.—You know—

FLETCHAH.—(fumbles in a pocket). Oh, to be suah! What's the price requiah-ed?

DICKY.—Well—ah—(solemnly). Let me see! Oh, yes! (face grows animated as he continues in an awe-inspiring whisper). Regular price, thirty-four cents, to members, thirty-three and two thirds cents. But they're marked down now, on account of our great spring sell, to thirty-three and one-half cents.

FLETCHAH.—A Sell! How vulgah! I do detest a bargain, it is so—so—plebeian. And such a saving, Ah 'm suah.

(Hands Dicky a dollar bill. Dicky proceeds to the cash drawer and scratches his head. Meddles with the cash considerably. Mutters wildly to himself).

DICKY.—Thirty—three—no! Thirty-three and one-half, minus one dollar—oh—

(Takes a piece of paper and figures. Finally he hands out the change. Presently he proceeds to wrap up the purchase. Footsteps are heard coming up the stairway. Dicky struggles wildly with the wrapping paper. Fletchah glances around nervously).

FLETCHAH.—Ah—er—O, I cawn't take that with me, don't ch' know. Think of my social standing. Suppose I should meet some of my friends, with that mussy bundle!

(Turns and flees precipitately just as a crowd enters, amid confused cries for Coop bargains. And above the door, carefully placed in an inconspicuous position, a sober red sign looks down on the busy scene: "Fly to the Coop! The Great Spring Sell!")

Ten-Second Interviews With College Celebrities

CHARLES BAWLS ROGERS, '07.—"Williamstown does not offer many social opportunities for a man like me, but by frequently running down to Pittsfield and Northampton I have tried to keep from being bored. But it is deucedly slow here in winter. I miss the artistic atmosphere of Chicago more than I can tell you."

TIM VAN ALLEN, '08.—"Say, I guess I'm about the tuffest boy you ever had in Billville. Did you see that big cop speak to me in Ad. the other night? Sure he did. Say, the girls like me though. I'm about the candy with them all right, all right. See the peach in the vaudeville wink at me? They like these boys that spend their money. And say, just put it in that I'm class cheer leader."

The following men have left college for good. Taxidermist Barrett will please take notice: Ollie Beard, '04, Joe Cheese, '04, Willie Finitnie, '05, Gussie Gish, '06 and Wilbur Wilmeding, '08.

The astronomy department has awarded to Spike Reid the contract for sweeping the heavens for the coming year.

"What makes more noise than a pig in a pen?" asked the facetious interlocutor at the recent minstrel show, as Ives touched a match to the bunch of firecrackers.

C. H. Burr was among the visitors to the library last week.

"It's pretty good in the long run," said General Hompe (of Auburn) as he gazed lovingly at the silver cup given him for second place in the five mile cross country.

"Don't call me 'Hank;' it makes me Wild," said Archibald Allen, when he was given his nickname. "And don't call me 'Hank' either," begged Leopold, "for it makes me Wilder."

The Secret of Immortality

"From what experience you have had, or perhaps we should rather say, from observation of matters of this nature, is it your candid opinion, in all frankness, that the soul of man is destined to eternal duration?" asked Mr. Gerig of Prof. Milham, as the two sat on the lab. fence munching peanuts.

"Your question," answered Prof. Milham, "brings up the scientific consideration of several purely theoretical hypotheses, which, combined with other data dependent upon mere belief, make the answer necessarily vague, unless both sides are stated, but, after careful deliberation and reading over three thousand pages of literature I think I can safely answer, theoretically, yes; practically, no."

NEW YORK LAW SCHOOL

35 Nassau Street, New York City

1. Follows the Dwight Method of legal instruction, the method of that great teacher, Prof. Theodore W. Dwight.
2. Gives thoroughly practical instruction, developing the principles of the law and the reasons upon which they rest.
3. Is in New York City,—the best place to learn New York law and procedure,—the most desirable place in which to establish a lawyer's practice. Its location in the city affords an opportunity to attend the sessions of the courts, and also to gain practical experience in lawyers' offices, in connection with the law school study of legal principles.
4. Confers the degree of LL. B. in two years; of LL. M. in three years.
5. Has a Day School and also an Evening School. A student can attend either. Both are at the same address.
6. Had 947 students in attendance the past year (1904-1905); of these 306 were college graduates.

JOHN B. STONE, JOHN H. FALLON,
General Agent, Williamstown.
Pittsfield, Mass.

“ONCE the question was, ‘Can a Christian man rightfully seek life insurance?’ That day is past. Now the question is, ‘Can a Christian man justify himself by neglecting such a duty?’ Your affairs may become involved and your property taken for debt. Your stocks and shares may fall in value. But a policy of life insurance cannot be taken for debt, cannot be alienated from your heirs, and if you have chosen your company discreetly, is subject to no commercial risk. It is as nearly sure as anything earthly can well be.”—HENRY WARD BEECHER.
